Roeland Reinders

A connector unblocked, redefining what's possible to start and grow companies, unblocking them by connecting them with the right insights and the right people.

Roeland has cultivated many relationships over the past years, which enables him to help companies land that key hire, marquee customer or raise capital.

He has spent over 25 years working on his own companies, either as entrepreneur or advisor. He loves the blank canvas and enjoys collaborating with other passionate people. During the genesis of a company, you're able to lay the foundation of what you want it to be in the future. You hire your first engineer, salesperson, recruiter, each of them leaving a lasting impression on the company.

Also, outside the tech-sector, Roeland has fostered many connections. His personal journey of reaching a 'prepared mind' has always revolved around meeting great individuals and getting to know them and their stories. He views the world as collections of people coming together to work on common goals. This led him to develop an extensive network in which he is always able to identify the most qualified people and connect them with others at the right time to work on great things.

Roeland has launched numerous businesses from the ground-up, growing and selling them through all economic cycles for the last 25 years in Europe, Asia, and US. His areas of expertise include strategic, creative, and business development from a leadership perspective.
